him, but not for. Men and women of the Hand had joined together on Roke a hundred or more years ago, forming a league of mages. Proud and secure in their powers, they had sought to teach others to band together in secret against the war makers and slave takers until they could rise openly against them. Women had always been leaders in the league, said Ember, and women, in the guise of salve sellers and net makers and such, had gone from Roke to other lands around the Inmost Sea, weaving a wide, fine net of resistance. Even now there were strands and knots of that net left. Medra had come on one of those traces first in Anieb's village, and had followed them since. But they had not led him here. Since the raid, Roke Island had isolated itself wholly, sealed itself inside powerful spells of protection woven and re woven by the wise women of the island, and had no commerce with any other people. "We can't save them," Ember said. "We couldn't save ourselves." Trusting the messenger, Morred entered the trap. He barely escaped with his life. The Enemy pursued him from the east to the west of Enlad in a trail of ruin. On the Plains of Enlad, meeting the companions who had stayed loyal to him, most of them sailors who had brought their ships to Enlad to aid him, Morred turned and gave battle. The Enemy would not confront him directly, but sent Morred's own spell-bound warriors to fight him, and worse, sent sorceries that shriveled up the bodies of his men till they "living, seemed the black thirst-dead of the desert." To spare his people, Morred withdrew. "I don't know. Hold on! A person from Adapt was supposed to meet me at the station. I like a horse rearing and then rolled so hard and far that the mast broke loose from its footing, reason to frighten them. They were not men. Irian looked down at the ground. After a long time she said, clearing her throat, not looking up, "Quite early on, impatient with wooing her massive physical indifference, he had worked up a charm, after her. Then she plodded gently on. He pressed against her flank and clung to her, for the "It's milk," I said. I must have looked like a complete idiot. said nothing, a non-rhetorical answer. Silence nodded, meaning himself. She sat on a while by the Thwilburn. She was troubled by what he had told her and by her thoughts and feelings in the Grove, and troubled that any thought or feeling could have troubled her there. She went to the house, set out her supper of smoked meat and bread and summer lettuce, and ate it without tasting it. She roamed restlessly back down the streambank to the water. It was very still and warm in the late dusk, only the largest stars burning through a milky overcast. She slipped off her sandals and put her feet in the water. It was cool, but veins of sunwarmth ran through it. She slid out of her clothes, the man's breeches and shirt that were all she had, and slipped naked into the water, feeling the push and stir of the current all along her body. She had never swum in the streams at Iria, and she had hated the sea, heaving grey and cold, but this quick water pleased her, tonight. She drifted and floated, her hands slipping over silken underwater rocks and her own silken flanks, her legs sliding through waterweeds. All trouble and restlessness washed away from her in the running of the water, and she floated in delight in the caress of the stream, gazing up at the white, soft fire of the stars. galley, which was rowed by forty slaves. there; could she have been dancing? I maintained a tactful silence. young man to the next and the next. He said, "You trusted me, giving me your names. Will you trust. Long after the invention of the True Runes, a related but nonmagical runic writing was developed. underground lake, which reflected the vaults of the rocks. There, too, on flimsy little rafts, people act of doing things well. Soon, he thought now, he would not need one. He would have real power over her. He had finally. "Send him on out to the dairy," said one of Alder's cowboys. "Gift's taking whatever comes." There was some sniggering and shushing. "So you thought. . . you thought that I. . . no!". listening. Another wizard, not Roke-trained but with the healer's gift, looked after the sick and. treeless valley, past grass-grown dumps and tailings. For a long time nobody would touch him. He had fallen down in a fit in San's doorway. He lay there. A cat came round the corner of a garden, no abandoned starveling but a white-pawed, well-. While he himself went west to fight dragons, he sent Erreth-Akbe east to try to establish peace. So little Diamond grew up in the finest house in Glade, a fat, bright-eyed baby, a ruddy, cheerful boy. He had a sweet singing voice, a true ear, and a love of music, so that his mother, Tuly, called him Songsparrow and Skylark, among other loving names, for she never really did like "Diamond." He trilled and caroled about the house; he knew any tune as soon as he heard it, and invented tunes when he heard none. His mother had the wisewoman Tangle teach him The Creation of Ea and The Deed of the Young King, and at Sunreturn when he was eleven years old he sang the Winter Carol for the Lord of the Western Land, who was visiting his domain in the hills above Glade. The Lord and his Lady praised the boy's singing and gave him a tiny gold box with a diamond set in the lid, which seemed a kind and pretty gift to Diamond and his mother. But Golden was a bit impatient with the singing and the trinkets. "There are more important things for you to do, son," he said. "And greater prizes to be earned." mechanical and violent. I stood and watched, hearing, behind me, the steady sough of hundreds. wondered if he had always talked to himself, if he had talked all the time when Silence lived with. A carter walking at his mule's head with a load of oakwood came upon them and took them both to. "So where is it?" Hound said. He was angry then, very angry, a hungry man whose food is snatched from his hand. He summoned the man Tern to reappear, but he did not know his true name and had no hold of heart or mind on him. The summons went unanswered. Silence before. There was a very long pause.
